Quality Education and the New UN Sustainable Development Agenda

- Co-hosted by: Asian Network for Quality (ANQ);
- Supported by: Chinese Society for Quality (CSQ)

Synopsis: The year 2015 will become very exciting for the United Nations. By 2015, neither of the goals of the "Education for All Agenda" (UNESCO) had been achieved nor had the education-related Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) been achieved. More than 150 world leaders are expected to attend the UN Sustainable Development Summit from September 25-27 at UN headquarters in New York to formally adopt an ambitious new sustainable development agenda. This momentous agenda will serve as the launch pad for action by the international community and by national governments to promote shared prosperity and well-being for all over the next 15 years. There is a global consensus about the need for a new forward-looking education agenda, which will round off work that has not been completed. In this respect, it will be about focusing on equity, learning and, above all, quality. It can be foreseen that education will be placed in the heart of the new global development agenda. Quality education will become a huge challenge of the new Sustainable Development Goals until 2030. IAQ QiETT is willing to address this global challenge. Since 2012, QiETT has succeeded in learning important new lessons in cooperation with the Asian Network for Quality (ANQ) and the national quality organizations in a large-scale project of IAQ's pilot region in Asia Oceania. In 2015 we will continue our work at the 4th IAQ/ANQ Symposium 2015 in Taipei.
